Connection Talent to Opportunity— Coming Soon

Description of our mission (Free to add more, this is just so you get the point)
For the longest the way we learn about competitions has been by word of mouth. — Ability to show skills being decided by zip code and school. We are working to build a central platform for competitions, that way any student with the passion is able to build a clear path to taking their skills to the next level.

Making it easier to: (no specific order, examples)

Decide what competitions are affordable

Choose competitions based on your skillset (How hard it is)

Central base for Putting Students in touch with competitions and competitions in touch with students.

Making it easier to find competitions in your niche

Save time spent looking for relevant competitions

Creating an equitable base for competitions, so it's no longer about who you know or what school you attend.

Helping lower income students get connected to spaces for improvement/finding talent in lower income communities

Myshay

Founding Mission / Inspo

Created the idea for Causey while in highschool, founded at 19 while at Cornell. Inspired by her experiences winning local chess competitions in LA and not getting to compete (and win) state and national level competitions until she moved across the country to detroit, despite already searching out competitions and having the skill. Working to make the competition space one that stops missing out on the abundance of talent in lower income communities, giving everyone the chance to take their skills and grow
